MRS. CRAIG BIDDLE OF PHILADELPHIA

Mrs. Craig Biddle and Her Butterflies.

By their fads shall ye know them," said a Newport wit when a visiting foreigner wanted to be sure who was who among the women of the "400." Mrs. Craig Biddle certainly is one of the "400," and she is known by her fond for butterflies.

It is safe to say that Mrs. Craig Biddle knows more about butterflies—the actual, not the metaphorical ones—than any one else in Newport or New York or anywhere in society north of Mrs. Huckle-Smit's house on Locust street in Philadelphia. She really knows them, and her cabinet and shelves contain some of the rarest of species. Mrs. Craig Biddle likes to talk butterflies to any one who really knows them.

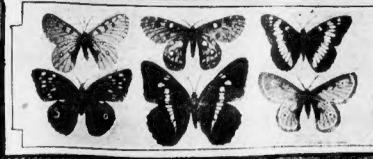

It happened last season that there was a very intimate little affair at Mrs. Craig Biddle's home. Nobody there really knew butterflies, but Mrs. Craig Biddle suddenly seemed to think that her collection was becoming neglected. Into her private museum she marshaled the guests.

"Now then," said Mrs. Biddle, pointing to a fat, gray moth with a reddish spot on its wings, "has a name of ten syllables. I never call it that. I always call it Mrs. —" She mentioned a name to visitors with a name hardly less potent than her own. The guests gaped, and then they laughed loud and long. The resemblance was there, and it was too ludicrous.

After that a curious, lanky butterfly with a beetle flush was exhibited as a noted the Warning from Prof. Cerboni, One of the Most Distinguished Scientists of Europe, 75 Years Old, Never Bathed in His Life, and Explains Why Bathing Upsets Nature's Intentions and Shortens Your Life!

I bathing necessary? Is bathing injurious? Is bathing the cause of ill health in individuals and eventually of decay in races? All these startling questions are raised by the recent utterances of Professor Frederico Cerboni, one of the most distinguished scientists of Italy, and it is rather surprising to find that there is much to be said on the anti-bathing side of the question.

Professor Cerboni, who is very well known in Florence, recently addressed society by announcing that he had never taken a bath in his life, and that the science of dirt, which helped in those who declined to bathe, was a benevolent one.

As the Professor is seventy-five years old and in excellent health it must be admitted that he has given the rule of not bathing a good trial and is a positive result, whether or not it is successful.

"To wash," said the Professor in a recent address, "is a proceeding repugnant to nature and injurious to health. The skin performs a most important function in maintaining health, and nature has made arrangements for keeping the skin in proper working order. When we wash the skin we interfere violently with the whole system by nature for maintaining its functions and thereby we injure not only the skin, but the health of the entire body. Soap and water wash away the natural oils which keep the skin soft and pliable and prevent it against cold.

"Regular washing renders the skin dry, hard and brittle, and it prematurely removes the body to cold, reduces the vitality, and through this and other causes bring about the premature death of the washer."

"Perhaps when I was a child in Rome and I was in no position to regulate my own affairs, my mother washed me, but since I have been in control of my actions I have religiously abstained from soap and water."

"When I was only a boy I realized that it was unnecessary to wash, and later, when I began my scientific studies, they forbade my further contact and made me unalterably opposed to washing. I have adhered to this rule all my life and I have never known as better's skin."

"Look at an anatomical work describing the nature of the skin and its appendages and if you approach the subject with an unprejudiced mind you will understand why it is wrong to wash. The skin is a most complicated device for the protection of the body. First of all you have the hairs with which every part of the body, but superstitious. There were no flies, and then the great black and white butterfly flew out of the window. It landed on the table and the woman of butterfly party was reverberating still in the old traditions of Philadelphia.

That this particular Biddle should have chosen butterflies for her life seems like a bit of the most delicious irony, for her original aversion to bathing was an aversion to the most poisonous social approval ever witnessed in either Philadelphia or New York.

For several years there had been a misunderstanding between the Biddles, who divided their time between the two cities of the opposing factions being Edward Biddle and Mrs. George W. Childs, the latter, the sister-in-law.

skin specialists, who would not consent to having his name used, on account of the professional rule forbidding doctors from taking directly to newspapers for publicity.

"It must be admitted that frequent washing with soap and water is not according to nature and not altogether hygienic. Nature furnishes secretions which are designed to protect the skin, and washing must interfere with this natural function to some extent; but unfortunately nature does not always work perfectly, and we must do our best to assist her."

"I think it would only be possible for this modern English practice of washing spreads among our population we must recognize all hope of recovering our former freshness."

"The evil of washing is also a serious one from the economic point of view. A vast amount of money and of time and labor, which are equivalent to money, are wasted in bathing. All the labor of the plumber and the manufacturer of bath and tub is absolutely wasted. The soap given up to bath tubs is wasted. This, soap, sponge, bath brushes and all the injurious chemicals of soapen solution ought to be thrown away."

"But, Professor," said an inquirer, "we have been told that if we allow ourselves to become dirty we shall become victims of microbes or germs of disease."

"That is nonsense," said the Professor. "Nature protects against disease by its own means. Heavy student of bacteriology knows that nature calls into existence benevolent microbes, which attack and destroy disease microbes."

"If we allow a comfortable, natural development, as you would call it, to accustom our persons, it will swarm us from disease. Do you find that the modern habit of washing protects those who practice it from disease? Not at all. The simple truth is that washing removes or destroys the useful organisms created by nature to protect us from disease. The microbes of dirt is benevolent."

"The habit of washing is the principal reason why the germ diseases kill so many people at the present day. In earlier ages they were not nearly so deadly, but in proportion as the habit of washing has increased they have become more deadly."

"The manner in which nature meets the attacks of disease germs by calling into existence the benevolent organisms is only of recent in Professor Cerboni's view and just beginning to be scientifically understood."

The professor's views receive a certain degree of support from many outstanding authorities of all nations, including the United States.

NEW YORK WOMEN IN THE TURKISH BATH, A FORM OF BATHING WHICH PROFESSOR CERBONI DECLARES IS THE MOST DEADLY OF ALL.

MOST UNHAPPY BRIDE OF EARL

The Young Queen of Spain, a Faded, Hollow-Cheeked, Nervous Wreck, Living Like a Frightened Rabbit in the Darkest Corners of the Great Palace in Terror of Anarchists and in Despair at the Intolerable Restrictions of the Royal Court.

There she, by side, and suddenly the terror of her new life began.

A bomb mysteriously concealed in a heavy carpet of flowers was thrown at the royal carriage from the house No. 38, Calle Mayor, Madrid, just as it was passing. The bomb fairly exploded, exploding under the King and Queen, and it killed the left hand of the King. The Queen's white dress was torn and splattered with blood. The bomb killed twelve or fourteen persons and injured eighty others, most of whom were spectators.

One year previously a bomb had been thrown at the King in Paris and killed the house of Captain Schuchard, an officer in attendance. He had the singular idea of having the dead animals skin prepared as a rug and sent as a present to the King of Spain. It was prepared with all the terrible holes made by the infernal machine showing plainly. The King accepted the present in good part and then gave it to the Queen to be used as a hearth rug in her bedroom, thinking that she would like to have such an interesting souvenir.

When she learned what the strange-looking object was she shrank with terror and begged the King to take it away at once. This was done, and since that time she has been taken to keep such mementoes out of Victoria's sight.

The King and Queen went on their honeymoon to the Palace of La Granja. They walked together in the beautiful gardens and in the woods, but they never went far without seeing suspicious-looking men peering up and down among the trees near the elms, away from the Queen.

The King told her they were detectives looking out for Anarchists.

"Shall we never be safe from them?" she asked. "Well, I suppose they won't be satisfied till they get me," said the King, in a remarkably careless manner.

When they went back to Madrid the Queen expected the disconcerts of Spanish court etiquette, in addition to the terrors of anarchy. She has about two hundred ladies and ladies-in-waiting. She is not allowed to do anything for herself, but every act must be performed for her by some herald, courtier, or Court functionary. Even when she retires at night an armed guard of soldiers is stationed at her door. This is an ancient custom, but it has acquired a new significance on account of the activity of the Anarchists.

One strange rule of the Spanish Court is that the Queen must retire to bed at eight o'clock at night. If she is inclined to linger a little to enjoy the music or watch the moonlight, a maid must be sent to her.

"I am not ready to go to bed the King and Queen," said the Queen. "But, Your Majesty, the ancient custom of the Court begins the Duchess."

"Well, well," says the Queen, "I will go." Every time she wishes to take a walk or go to the theatre in Madrid without the customary ceremony there is always a Duchess who says:

"But, Your Majesty, it is not according to the ancient custom of the Court."

In August the King and Queen went for a holiday to England, where they hoped to escape from the Anarchists, as well as from excessive Court ceremonial, but as to the future they were bitterly disappointed.

QUEEN VICTORIA OF SPAIN.

WHILE in England the King went to the life of Wight in order to enjoy the famous painting week at Cowes and visit the Queen's mother, Princess Henry of Battenberg. The King's yacht, the Gladiolus, was lying at Southampton, the port from which the passage to Cowes is usually made. Shortly before the King and Queen arrived in Southampton, on their way to the yacht, the police caught sight of two of the most dangerous Spanish Anarchists lurking near the dock. A ring of soldiers with fixed bayonets was formed about the dock and nobody was allowed to go within fifty yards of it.

The King and Queen embarked on Sundermond and shortly after they went on board news was circulated for them and the crew. During the entire service sailors with fixed bayonets guarded the King and Queen.

The King and Queen also went to Scotland, where they visited the Earl and Countess of Argyll. At the little town of Oban the inhabitants gathered at the station to welcome them, and some one threw a large bouquet into the carriage.

The Queen, with the recollection of the Madrid bomb, with fresh in her mind, turned pale and started up in terror. When she realized that the object really was, she smiled faintly and bowed to the doctor, an old Scotch woman. The bouquet was a label inscribed in Scotch dialect: "Glad to see ye hae."

King Edward and Queen Alexandra went by the yacht to stay good bye to the King and Queen of Spain when they left England. As the two Queens were bidding each other farewell on the gangplank of the yacht, Queen Victoria was overheard to say:

"I doubt if I shall ever see you again."

In the young Queen's walk away to the gloom of the Madrid palace and the terror of anarchy.

"God spare me!" screamed the Queen in terror, as King Alfonso gently parted the portières. She was kneeling before her prie-dieu praying for safety from the Anarchists. Trembling and bursting into hysterical sobs, she said: "Everything terrifies me; the slightest little noise freezes my heart, dear Alfonso, for nowhere are we safe from the cruel assassins."

NOWHERE have youthful happiness and sanguine expectation turned as quickly to sorrow and disillusionment as in the case of young Queen Victoria of Spain.

Articles in the English and other European newspapers state that she is a nervous, hollow-eyed wreck, a mere shadow of the rose-cheeked, robust and comely English maiden who became a Queen less than four months ago.

From the very day of her marriage the Queen has been in constant, hourly danger of a horrible death. She was almost blown to pieces by an Anarchist bomb, thrown during the wedding procession, and since then plots against her husband's life have been discovered in nearly every place they have lived in or have visited. Almost every day the Queen has heard reports of Anarchists seen hovering in the vicinity like human vultures waiting for a feast of blood.

Although only a few months have elapsed since she became Queen of Spain, it is already common gossip in England that Victoria would gladly relinquish all the honors and the glory of her lofty position, if that were possible, to be back in her own country leading her former quiet and untroubled life as Princess "Ella" of Battenberg.

The King himself believes that he is more likely to be blown to pieces than to die in his bed and accepts the situation philosophically and even cheerfully and jokes with his wife upon the subject. But the Queen cannot reconcile herself to the dreadful situation, and it weighs more and more terribly upon her spirits every day.

It is stated that when the King or any person attached to the court approaches her unexpectedly from behind she starts in fear and sometimes cannot repress a cry of terror. The King recently entered her room while she was having a shower, and the Queen started up.

"God spare me!" screamed the Queen in terror, as King Alfonso gently parted the portières. She was kneeling at her prie-dieu, praying for safety from the Anarchists. Trembling and bursting into hysterical sobs, she said: "Everything terrifies me; the slightest little noise freezes my heart, dear Alfonso, for nowhere are we safe from the cruel assassins."

The Queen's apartments are guarded day and night by picked army guards, but she believes, and others too, that the Spanish Anarchists are possessed of such devilish ingenuity and desperate courage that all precautions against them must be in vain. The Anarchists glowingly line the darkest corners of the palace, and dare to go to the windows lest an assassin should take aim at her.

The Queen's life has been made miserable not only by her fears of assassination but also by the extraordinarily harassing etiquette and gloomy surroundings of the Spanish court. She was seduced by the glamour of a crown, but when she came to wear it she found her life was as miserable as that of a condemned prisoner.

The Princess Victoria Augusta of Battenberg, known as Princess Ella, had a happy childhood, and led, for a princess, a simple life. Her mother, the youngest daughter of Queen Victoria, spent most of her time at a charming cottage in the Isle of Wight, the garden of England. The King of Spain sorely envied an attractive wife who would help to strengthen his somewhat feeble throne. The Princess Ella was fascinated by the idea of being a queen, and, encouraged by her mother and the English royal family, she accepted him. The first shock she received was to find herself compelled to adopt her husband's religion. Had she changed her religion at an ordinary time from constant devotion to no religion could have criticized her action, but as she took it as a compulsory condition of her marriage the expectations must have been harder.

The prospective Queen was received in Spain with a state which promised well for the future, and the wedding ceremony which followed on May 31 was resplendent with a splendor which has never been exceeded. The wedding procession left the Cathedral, King and Queen sat in their splendid state car-

THE Goulds and their Chinese Brother-in-Law

TO the afternoon parts of the earth, almost, has been defined the area that the actor of the wife of the multi-millionaire, Howard Gould, has taken a Chinese for a husband—not a rich Chinese merchant of the Chinese quarter of San Francisco or New York, but a poor Chinese day laborer of the earthquake-stricken who is fortunate if he earns $2 a day piling bricks.

But this astonishing piece of news is quite settled, for popular interest, by the later report that Mr. and Mrs. Sun Yue have decided to pay a laborious visit to their rich and aristocratic relatives at "Castle Gould," the Howard Gould country place near Fort Washington, Long Island, New York. As Mr. Sun Yue is reported to have remarked soon after the Chinese ceremony which made him the husband of Katherine Clementine Gould's sister:

"Piling bricks verry hard work. Pile bricks also very make the dished. Now Million wife get his relatives New York wide. Live but-very well, go and visit New York relatives, also same Million wide man."

So, according to the well-founded report, Mr. Sun Yue will presently be taking his wife and much needed rest from his brick-piling labor in the spacious drawing room and beneath the downy coverlets of Castle Gould.

If Mrs. Gould is seriously agitated over the prospect of this extraordinary invasion of her set palace on the shores of Long Island Sound, she has not as yet expressed her feelings for publication.

However, recalling the strong language which she uttered at the head of her castle kitchen, where, having, these same words together with capital "D's" figuring in the accident's suit for $250,000 damages, her sentiments respecting the prospect of her Chinese brother-in-law probably are not altogether complimentary to that new relative.

Strenuous Efforts to Sidetrack Sun Yue Indeed, it is said that the Howard Goulds are exhausting every means that occur to them to induce Mr. Sun Yue and his bride to stay where they are.

If there have been letters and telegrams to this effect, there are ample grounds for the belief that they are not couched in the language of ordinary social converse or even of diplomacy.

It would not be surprising if Mrs. Gould should appeal to the law to keep Brother-in-law Sun Yue out of Castle Gould and off the Howard Gould farm Niagara, though it is true that when others have invited the new arrival at Mrs. Gould's, her experiences have not been pleasant.

When her mother, Mrs. Frances Smith, brought Mrs. Gould into court to show why she should not pay a claim amounting to $300 for goods and other things made by her daughter, the jury told her she was "not pay, pay."

Once Castle Gould itself, a noble pile modeled after Killarney Castle in Ireland, was "taken" by common inebriates because of an annual corporation bill amounting to about $50,000.

Then another court session Mrs. Gould was directed to pay artist J. J. Jones $25,000 for a portrait for which she sat, and when it was finished considered she didn't like it.

There was, too, the case of Mr. Gould's former valet, Frank Burton Moskowsky, who lost one of his own while in Mr. Gould's service and asked Judge and jury to give him $25,000 of Mr. Gould's money, in lieu of a situation for life which he claimed had been promised him, and which didn't materialize.

From these episodes, among many others, it may reasonably be surmised that Mrs. Howard Gould is not making very extensive preparations for the proposed visit of Brother-in-law Sun Yue.

Cousin Ying Fu Cook on Gould Yacht In all the Howard Gould establishment probably there is only one person from whom Mr. Sun Yue will receive a warm welcome of words. That is Brother-in-law Mrs. Sun Yue's second cousin on his mother's side, namely, Ying Fu, who holds the enviable position of cook aboard the Howard Gould yacht Niagara.

"Verry good," said Ying Fu when he heard the great news. "Sun Yue, he verry good man. Good Chinese, verry good man. Sun Yue come to New York with Million wife, all same Good, he have verry fine dish."

"Sun Yue maybe he like Melian dish, also same Million wife, he like all light pretty good. Sun Yue come my side verry good. Get chop chop, get chop chop chop. Get chop chop, get chop chop chop. Get chop chop, get chop chop chop. Sun Yue have verry fine line my side, get."

Of course there is a possibility that Brother-in-law Sun Yue may be deluded even what rest from brick-piling he could get on the quiet shore front stage at Castle Gould. It is so common that Sister Sun Yue, Mrs. Sun Yue, and her friends, travel from San Francisco a few years ago to visit her sister and was denied admission to the Howard Gould house.

Therefore she stationed herself just outside the entrance and waited. When Mrs. Gould came forth to meet her carriage she examined the carriage door behind her and ordered the coachman to drive on. The future Mrs. Sun Yue did not wait any longer. She had refused a handsome cash offer to give up misadventure in China town, San Francisco, to go and live with the Goulds in New York. In Palo Alto, she accepted this episode as notice that she was no longer considered in the light of a relative.

"Cigar verry fine, but no like. Me like hope also same China side. Verry fine, verry fine, verry fine."

With Brother-in-law Sun Yue one within the portals of Castle Gould, that what a spectacle it would make if he were summarily ejected. It is easier to picture Mrs. Howard Gould making the best of Sun Yue than it is to picture him being ejected from the best of Mrs. Gould.

CAME BACK FROM THE DEAD!

Four Remarkable Recent Instances of Men and Women Who Came Back to Life, Who Describe Their Feelings and All Agree That DEAD PEOPLE SEE, HEAR AND UNDERSTAND WHAT IS GOING ON ABOUT THEM.

THE question whether any man has ever died and been brought back to life again by some chemical or medical agency. When the body is dead, where is the soul? It is a stirring question, but one of eternal interest. It is a question that has been asked of several recent cases in which human beings have apparently had this strange experience.

Shakespeare spoke of the grave as "that narrow covered country from whose hours no traveler returns," and that is also the view of the majority of the four remarkable cases which are related on this page. Many intelligent men who believe that a return from death to life is possible, and their view is supported by the four remarkable cases which are related on this page.

The question is the subject of constant scientific investigation by the experts of the Psychical Research Society.

There are many facts and generally accepted beliefs which apparently make it reasonable to argue that a spirit may return from death to life. All Christians and practically all who have any religious belief whatever hold that the soul or spirit is a conscious personality existing apart from the body and that it does not die with the body. On the other hand, many doctors insist that there are cases, like those cited on this page, in which human beings die and are brought back to life again by some chemical or medical agency.

How Mrs. Haskins and Came to

BY DR. THOMAS H. HODGSON.

I AM at a loss to account for Mrs. Haskins' apparent death and return to life. In a practice of thirty years I have never known anything like it. I did not see her while she was in that peculiar, death-like condition. I arrived at her bedside just as she was regaining consciousness. But the testimony of the nurses, Mrs. Thomas P. Clowry, and of the young woman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nichols, as well as of her husband, James A. Haskins, convinces me that the patient went through a marvelous experience.

From high fever and pulse at 160 a condition of intense struggle for life she sank into a state in which there was no perceptible breath or heart action, and remained so for about twenty minutes. I might conjecture that she was in a cataleptic condition, but I have never known cataplexy to occur under such circumstances of acute disease. Cataplexy never occurs in cases of chronic convulsive condition.

The natural expectation of a person in her condition was that she should pass on into death. No restorative were applied when she seemingly sank away. Her husband fanned her a little, which amounted to nothing, and after a few minutes gave that up. She really came back to consciousness of her own accord. The disease then continued its regular course.

Her first baby daughter, Doris, died when eight months old. The appearance of this dead child in her death vision is one of the most peculiar phases of this mysterious case, which may well challenge the skill of psychologists to explain.

Henry Hutchinson, of Croydon, England, who tells his own experience here, was, as dead, in the opinion of competent observers, as any man who was ever laid out beneath the ground. He knew that he was dead, and he heard the physician say that he was dead. He felt his family pursuing over him. He felt his spirit carried out of his body and lifted up in a vision of light, in which there were many strange forms.

Hutchinson's spirit did not wish to get away from his body, but along to it passionately. His spirit did not wonder at an adventure in the unknown world, but was filled with a desire to return to the body. His case is different from that of the others, but not less interesting.

He suffered agonies of spirit when he knew that his body was being prepared for the grave. This came, like two others, seems to show that the dying or dead man, hear and understand what is going on about them. He was shocked when the burial undertaker lowered his corpse into a narrow coffin. He heard a cry of earth and stones thrown down on the coffin, and lay there just up to his breast. Though he was dead, he felt the doctor's hand on his forehead, and an accidental application of the galvanic current brought him back to life.

If this extraordinary narrative is to be relied on, the disembodied spirit may linger in the vicinity of the body to the hope that life may be restored on the physical mechanism.

The family and friends of Richard Howard, of 814 North street, near 57th avenue, Brooklyn, believe that he died and came back to life again for a short period before leaving the earth forever. Mr. Howard had been sinking under a combination of rheumatism and heart disease, and he died on Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock. It was 10 o'clock when the doctor went away, leaving his family to wait with the dying man till the doctor should return.

Howard's pulse gradually grew feebler, the pallor of death spread over his face, and at 11 o'clock his heart ceased to beat. Everybody felt sure that he was dead.

Late in the afternoon Mrs. Howard sent for the physician, Dr. Thomas H. Hodgson, to see her husband. He arrived at the house and found her husband lying on the bed and placed on a couch in a darkened room, arranging it in the manner customary with the bodies of the dead. His mourning wife sat patiently only and wearily by his side.

At last the undertaker arrived at the house and Mrs. Howard went out to receive him. It was 12 o'clock at night. The undertaker went to the room where the corpse had been laid out and was astonished to find his wife sitting bolt upright.

"I was floating away. Then my little dead baby, Doris, came to me. I held out my arms to her and held her close to my breast. Oh, I was so happy. Perhaps that was heaven."—From the narrative of Mrs. James A. Haskins.

My Patient Haskell Died Life Again.

The Attended Mrs. Haskell.

Nothing had happened. The crisis did not seem to be the last. Mrs. Haskell had really died when she had this attack. I think that her sensitive would have been as she now rests. I think it possible that a person is dying may remain conscious through some of the organs of the body.

There's nothing! The corpse cooled, meaning his life and undercarriage hurried him back to bed. He was not alive, but perfectly conscious and in no way, although weak.

Another case occurred recently in which a man as an appearance and yet came back to life. Mr. McKinnon, of No. 51 North Broadway, New York, was struck in the head by a iron bolt. Joseph's Hospital. It was found that he had had a compound fracture of the skull. The skull was performed an operation upon the skull to remove the bone from pressure and to remove blood particles of bone. While the surgeons were working, his McKinnon's heart stopped beating and only grew wild in spite of all the efforts of the doctors to revive him. He was dead, by all known means.

Some time after it had been placed there a person a slight tremor of the chest muscles, and the attention of the doctors and day to apply the most vigorous methods for resuscitation in the apparently dead.

Some time after, injected a strong solution of which passed through the arterial system to heart, and they succeeded in restoring respiration. Mr. McKinnon's heart was beating freely as though he were alive. He was then, it seemed, still alive, but he did not show the slightest signs of consciousness, and it was necessary to use means constantly to keep him from passing into a coma. Doctors and nurses worked over him constantly for two days, and at the end of that time recovered consciousness. From a great time exposed to perfect health.

Henry Hutchinson, after being buried as dead, was dug up and taken to the hospital dissecting room (as shown here) where an accidental application of the galvanic current brought him to life.

There is, of course, no more solemn or mysterious subject known to the human mind than Death and the future life beyond the grave. The Bible says: "He that goeth to the grave shall come up no more." (Job, Chapter 7, Verse 9.) And yet Modern Science hopes by patient investigation to learn something of the great mystery of the future.

In the past few weeks four persons who had

What I Saw and Did While I Was Dead.

By Mrs. James A. Haskins, of Middleboro, Mass.

During this time, or part of it, at least, I had been in the habit of reading a great deal about death. I had been reading a great deal about it, and I had been thinking of it very much.

apparently passed to the other world came back to life and have been able to record their experiences. The most startlingly interesting fact upon which all four agree is that they were fully conscious during death. The Psychical Research Society has taken these cases under investigation, and will endeavor to collect all possible additional evidence to determine whether dead people see, hear and understand what is going on about them.

My Experiences After I Was Dead and Buried.

Ma and Mary Jane's mother had packed up their trunks, and next morning we were to go. Ma had the horses carefully sent back. She loved animals. She isn't one of those who pretend to love them. The woods are full of people who think they love animals. You often hear it said, "He is a great lover of horses." It is quite a common expression; but when you meet and know the people about whom it is said you find they possess some nice horses and are simply proud of them. They will put curb bits and check reins in their mouths, cut off their tails, and would cut off their heads if it were fashionable. If the horse grows old or sustains an injury, they will sell him to a cabman or livery stable or truckman. Is that loving horses?

The one who really loves a horse will be kind and gentle with him, and when he grows old or lame will put him out to pasture to spend his old age in peace and quiet. The man who is simply proud of his horses is the same about his dogs, his children and his wife. The thing he loves is HIMSELF. He wants those horses to gratify his pride.

He wants prize horses, prize dogs and prize children. When they have been exhibited, away goes selfish mister man to his club, and makes arrangements with some friends to go hunting so he can KILL a few animals.

I heard a man say, "There's no sport like killing a deer." Heavens! what sport is there in taking the life of the beautiful thing? If he could give life to a deer—ah! then that would be sport. That's the man who ships his little children off to a boarding school when they are babies and ought to be at home. He says it is best for them, but he really wants them out of the way. Their mother is the same. She is simply, proud of things, everything but her husband. Oh, well, I can't help it, so why should I care?

The next day came, and the bus took us down to the station where we were to take the train for New York. Well, the train soon came along; that was its regular business. It hadn't promised any one it would come, but it was one of those businesslike trains, and made a regular habit of going to some particular place instead of just starting out with no destination and letting the passengers settle it among themselves. It

Tige wondered where good trains go to when they die. There is a lot of difference in trains. There are fast male trains and slow old female trains, I suppose. Pa said he knew a train by the name of Emmanuel Grant Train. But the one we took got us to Long Island City on time, where we took the ferry for New York. A very funny thing happened on that ferryboat.

SAM LOYD'S VAUDEVILLE PUZZLE.

A THOUSAND PRIZES FOR CORRECT ANSWERS

William Tell, after freeing his country, appears for the first time in vaudeville. He tells his son to hold up eight apples, each marked with a letter, so as to spell a word. Then with three arrows he shoots away one word, leaving the remaining letters so arranged that they spell a complete word. One thousand puzzle books will be given as prizes for the correct solution of this problem. Mail your answers to William Tell's Problem, P. O. Box 1551, New York City.

RICH SYNDICATE TO FIGHT EXTRADITION OF SMUGGLER CHIEFS

FEAR REGN OF TERROR IN CHINATOWN.

Judge Refuses to Give Up Captured Smugglers to Officers, Despite Moody's Order.

PHILLIPS, WITH GOLD, FLEES TO LIVERPOOL

United States immigration officials here are anxiously awaiting a cablegram from Liverpool, England, announcing the arrest there of Goodman Phillips, alleged to be the American chief in the smuggling syndicate which has illegally landed 1,500 Chinamen in Boston and vicinity within a year.

Phillips, who is said to carry thousands of dollars with him, is supposed to have sailed from St. John's, Newfoundland, for Liverpool on the Furness River Dalmian on October 5.

United States authorities have taken steps to have him taken into custody as he is held in England, although they admit that there is grave doubt of the possibility of obtaining his extradition under the treaty.

A clash between Massachusetts and Rhode Island and Connecticut and the United States, which has been going on since the capture of Phillips, has been intensified by the fact that the United States officials have refused to give up the captured smugglers to the officers of the British government, despite the order of the British minister, Mr. Moody.

NELLIE SCOTT, WHO FROM ELOPEMENT IS NOW BRIDE OF VICE-PRESIDENT'S SON

FAIRBANKS AND HIS PRETTY BRIDE PLAN HONEYMOON

Eloping Couple Receive Good Wishes of Friends and Are Filled with Happiness

Chicago, Oct. 13.—The happy couple, Mr. and Mrs. Fairbanks, who were married last night at the Hotel Waldorf, are expected to leave for their honeymoon trip to the Mediterranean coast.

The bride, Miss Nellie Scott, who was formerly the bride of the late Vice-President, is now the bride of the Vice-President's son.

The wedding ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Williams, who is the pastor of the Church of the Holy Trinity.

The bride and groom were surrounded by a large number of guests, including the Vice-President and his family.

The wedding reception was held at the Hotel Waldorf, where the bride and groom were entertained by their friends.

The bride and groom are expected to return to their home in Chicago after their honeymoon trip.

The wedding ceremony was a very simple one, but it was a very happy one.

The bride and groom are both very happy and are looking forward to their new life together.

Charcoal Kills Bad Breath

Bad Odor of Indigestion, Smoking, Drinking or Eating Can Be Instantly Stopped

Sample Package Mailed Free.

Other people notice your bad breath when you would not notice it at all. It is nauseating to other people in taking before them and while you are taking, give them a whiff or two of your bad breath. It usually comes from food fermenting on your stomach. Sometimes you have it in the morning—bad breath, sour, bilious, bad breath. You can stop that at once by swallowing one or two sticks of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges, the most powerful gas and odor absorbers ever prepared.

Sometimes your mouth will reveal themselves in your breath to those who talk with you. "You have bad breath," "You're eating cabbage," and all of a sudden you learn in the face of your friend. Charcoal is a powerful absorber of odors, as every one knows. That is why Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are so quick to stop all gases and odors of odorous foods, or gas from indigestion.

Don't use breath perfumes. They never conceal the odor and never absorb the gas that causes the odor. Besides, the very fact of using them reveals the reason for their use. Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges in the first place stop for good all odors and absorb the gas, and make your breath pure and sweet. Just after you've eaten. Then no one will turn away from you when you breathe or talk. Your breath will be pure and fresh, and beside your food will taste so much better to you at your next meal. Just try it.

Charcoal does other wonderful things too. It carries away the bad stomach and intestinal, all the impurities there named, and when you swallow the bad breath. Charcoal is a purifier as well as an absorber.

Charcoal is now by far the best most easy and mild laxative known. A whole bowl will do no harm. In fact, the more you take the better. Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are made of pure willow bark and mixed with just a faint flavor of honey to make them palatable for you, but not too sweet. Try just a few when life is candy. They are absolutely harmless.

Get a new, pure, sweet, fresh, freshen your stomach for your next meal, and keep the intestines in good working order. These two things are the secret of good health and long life. You can get all the charcoal necessary to do these wonderful things by getting Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges. We want you to test these little wonder workers yourself. Buy them. Send us your name and address. We will send you a sample, and if you are convinced, go to your druggist, and get a box of them. You'll feel better all over, more comfortable, and "crisper" inside.

Send us your name and address to day and we will at once send you a sample to prove to you. Address: F. A. Stuart Co., 200 North 10th St., Marshall, Mich.

PIANOS AND ORGANS.

We Make No Piano Trust Agreements

WE NEVER DID—WE NEVER WILL.

TO THE PUBLIC: You have of course been somewhat interested in our fight with the Piano Trust and sometimes wonder why they, the Big People, in the Piano Combine have not driven us to the wall and made us quit and crushed us out of business—the chief reason and it seems a simple one, that is, the people have been buying their pianos from us and not from the High Priced Warehouses of the Trust—down town—the Trust warehouses are almost at a standstill—nothing doing and the Trust agreements prevent the dealers cutting the price of Trust instruments a single dollar. The minute they start cutting they smash their contracts and their strength as a combine to milk the public is gone and then the Big Bluff Margin of Profit on their pianos is uncovered and shown to be just a plain unvarnished "Hold Up." Next week we will tell you how we are able to get all kinds of Trust and other High Grade Pianos new and second-hand. This anti-trust fight is merely a case of our brains and money against mere money, Trust money. The time for you to buy your piano is now while our brains make it possible for you to buy the best at a price that is so low as to be absolutely ridiculous.

BUY YOUR PIANO YOURSELF—DON'T PAY AGENTS

When a dozen, two dozen, 50 or 100 Trust Pianos, new or second-hand, get through force of circumstances, to our storage salesrooms, we put on our sacrifice expensive tag, and the piano goes regardless of maker, trust or no trust, to the first man or woman with brains enough to know a good thing when they see it.

VANDERBILT RACE REALLY VICTORY FOR THE CARS BUILT IN AMERICA

BY J. C. KERRISON.

As the Vanderbilt race has been the most successful of the season, it is not surprising that the cars built in America have been the most successful. Announcement

Achievement will best serve as an introduction to this announcement rather than explanation.

"WATCH THE HAYNES."

Was the tip passed around by the wise ones who had already made the rounds of the Vanderbilt Cup Cars on Long Island previous to the American Trial? It was not necessary for us to take the tip, because the valuable, exclusive features fairly bulged out on it, and you will observe that the Haynes, which was the only stock car in the trials, defeated all the highest priced special built racing machines. The Haynes has proven all. It completed the race at a record-breaking speed without a single adjustment. It was the first American Motor Car built, and that means it includes the greatest wealth of profitable experience, without which no automobile is worth much. Refinement has followed experience, its reputation and sale have not been based on bluster or claims, and to-day the Haynes stands without a peer for touring on New England roads. It is what may be termed

"A Conscientious Car."

The materials used on every part of the Haynes are of the very best that can be obtained. The factory occupies numerous large up-to-date buildings fitted with machinery of the most approved type. The Haynes Company are not assemblers of automobiles, they are manufacturers. But few parts go into the Haynes that are not made in their own factory, and those few consist of wheels, tires, radiators and Induction Coils. The Haynes drop forge shop provides all those on the car, and forgings are used everywhere, gear shafting and brake levers, starting handle, lamp brackets, axle, crank shaft, in fact to explain further would be to read through the list of component parts in the Haynes. The castings such as motor base, transmission case, etc., all made in the Haynes Foundry. The bodies and tops, which would please the most critical, are also built by the company under expert and careful supervision. I would like to tell you more about these ideal cars, but space forbids.

FOR LAME HEARTS

It is quite the truth that New England suffers from Lame Hearts. They are the weak, the feeble, the timid, the nervous, the pale, and sickly. The physicians say that the cause of all these troubles is a cause for shrunken hearts that flaccid, as well as lame hearts. The remedy is to take a course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. This medicine will strengthen the heart, and develop her breasts and make her charming on all earth. One of our friends can give you the proof. She is a fine and perfect blond, and grows naturally. Here's absolute evidence: Dr.
